Aloha Saint Louis School Parents and Guardians,

I have been on and off campus for the past two weeks at professional development conferences and at fundraising events; however, I am so proud of the many exciting things that have happened here at Saint Louis School during that time and I’ve been collecting pictures of a few of those activities that you can see below. The good news of our athletic teams that have reached championships. Academically, we continue to shine with award winning students in the area of language arts and math. In regards to the arts, our band has performed proudly at various events and our actors have shined on stage at Mamiya Theater. Finally, the opening of our elementary school next year has created a great demand for students hoping to enter Saint Louis School from grades K-8. This past Sunday, there was standing room only at our open house representing the largest number of families we’ve had in many years thanks to your help.

In short, there is so much to be thankful for and I do want to take this opportunity to say mahalo nui loa for sending your young gentlemen to us. Have a great Thanksgiving and I look forward to seeing all of you when we return to school.

Memor et Fidelis,

Dr. Glenn Medeiros
Saint Louis School
Head of School
Here one of our Saint Louis School football players hugs his father in appreciation for his support at the championship football game at Aloha Stadium.
Mr. Almodova guides students as they write letters of appreciation to those serving our country in the military.

I bumped into these students right outside my office videotaping themselves for a special project they were working on.
Above is a picture I posted on Facebook that speaks about the successful Open House we just had.

It is wonderful to our students using their critical thinking skills while playing chess.
Here a former Saint Louis graduate and professor at Arizona State University shared his leadership techniques with our students.

Our gentlemen did a fine job of acting at Mamiya Theater recently.
From water polo to football, our students continue to excel in sports.

Middle School students shared their knowledge about saints with parents.
Right before Thanksgiving each year, it has been a tradition for our students and teachers to make peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for those staying at the Institute of Human Services [IHS]. This way, members of their staff who normally prepare food for those staying at IHS can focus instead on preparing a feast for those same people to be served on Thanksgiving. Happy Thanksgiving everyone!

My prayers will be with you during this holiday season.
