Aloha Saint Louis School Parents and Guardians,

Family spirit is one Characteristic of a Marianist Education that comes to mind as we reflect upon Christmas and New Year celebrations with family and friends. As our faculty, staff, and students returned to school, we moved from spending time with one family at home to another one right here on the slopes of Kalaepohaku. On Tuesday, our teachers returned to school one day prior to our students returning. On that day our teachers were provided opportunities to meet and discuss important topics in addition to enjoying each other’s company while taking part in various activities. When our students returned to school on Wednesday, it was clear to see their joy in being able to share time with their Crusader brothers.

Happy New Year to all of you and remember to stay CrusaderStrong in 2017!

Memor et Fidelis,

Glenn Medeiros, Ed.D.

Here our teachers take part in an activity that tests their ability to work together collaboratively.
In this picture, teachers create a miniature home for the particular animal group they are assigned to.

Our faculty and staff were split into pods for lunch on Tuesday. This is one of nine pods.
This Crusader has come back to school fully equipped with help from his mother with his SLS uniform, flask, and backpack sporting our red and blue colors and logos!

Tua represented Saint Louis School honorably during interviews on national television at the U.S. Army All Star game.
Judge Kirimitsu and his wife was kind enough to introduce me to the president of our sister school in Japan that we’ve partnered with for over 41 years and counting.

It was nice to hear our elementary students sing together once again during Morning Assembly.

It’s great to see SLS graduate, Maleko McDonnell, doing a wonderful job on KITV news.

It’s always nice to see our alumni return to campus to visit. Nate Herbig 16’ stopped by to share that he has transitioned well from Saint Louis School to Stanford University. He gets up early each day to practice football, go to class, weight train, practice again, and then study. His days are long, but he has the right mindset to be very successful both on and off the field. He is truly a fine example of what it means to be a Saint Louis Man.
